Start by eliciting vocabulary from the students as they describe what they see in the images. Encourage them to use adjectives to express their opinions about the arrangements, thereby incorporating language elements relevant to floral design. Main ESL Lesson Activities

Vocabulary-Building Activity: Floral Design Scavenger Hunt

Start by providing students with a list of floral design-related vocabulary words such as "bouquet," "arrangement," "foliage," etc. Then, organize a scavenger hunt around the school or classroom where students have to find and match pictures of different flowers and arrangements to the corresponding vocabulary words. This activity encourages movement and peer interaction while reinforcing new terms.

Listening Comprehension: Floral Design Interview

Prepare an audio recording or video of an interview with a professional florist discussing their work and the art of floral design. After playing the recording, facilitate a class discussion using comprehension questions related to the interview content. This activity allows students to practice listening skills and engage in group discussions.

Roleplay: Creating a Floral Arrangement Shop

Divide the class into small groups and assign each group a role (e.g., florist, customer, shop assistant). With assigned roles, students can engage in roleplay scenarios involving buying/selling floral arrangements or discussing custom designs. This hands-on exercise encourages creative expression while using newly acquired vocabulary in context.

Reading and Writing: Floral Design Showcase Brochure

In this activity, task the students with creating a brochure showcasing different types of floral designs along with descriptions using the vocabulary they have learned. Encourage them to include writing about color schemes, flower meanings, and arrangement styles. This project integrates reading comprehension with descriptive writing skills.

ESL Homework Assignment

For homework, students are tasked with creating their own floral arrangement using either real or craft flowers. They should then write a short paragraph describing their design, paying particular attention to the vocabulary and techniques discussed in the lesson. Additionally, students can research a famous floral designer and present their findings in the next class.

This hands-on assignment encourages practical application of the lesson content while providing an opportunity for individual creativity and further exploration of the topic.
