Create a "Yes or No" game where students are given a series of scenarios related to the mischievous behavior of the character David in the story. For each scenario, students have to decide whether it's something David would do (answering "Yes") or not (answering "No"). This activity not only introduces students to the character and theme of the book but also encourages them to use language elements such as "yes," "no," and simple descriptive phrases related to behavior.

Main ESL Lesson Activities

Vocabulary Activity: Word Scramble

Divide the class into small groups and provide each group with a set of jumbled-up words related to the story "No, David!" such as "mischievous," "scold," "naughty," "obey," and "apologize." Instruct the students to unscramble the words and match them with their definitions. Encourage group discussions to figure out the meanings of the words.

Listening Exercise: Story Retelling

Play an audio recording of the story "No, David!" for the students. Then, have them work in pairs to retell the story in their own words. This activity not only tests their listening comprehension but also encourages them to use descriptive language and narrative skills.

Roleplay: Acting Out Scenarios

Assign different scenarios from the book to small groups of students and have them act out these scenes. For example, one group can portray a scene where David is being scolded by his mother, while another group can depict a scenario where David apologizes for his actions. This hands-on exercise allows students to engage with the story's themes and characters in a creative way.

Reading and Writing: Character Diary Entry

After reading the story, ask students to imagine themselves as David and write a diary entry from his perspective. Encourage them to use vocabulary from the story and express David's thoughts and feelings about his actions. This activity promotes reading comprehension, writing skills, and empathy towards different characters.

ESL Homework Assignment

For homework, students are encouraged to write a short story or draw a series of pictures depicting a personal experience where they either misbehaved or were scolded for their actions.
